

Volume 1 |
Issue 5
16th
November
2016

Answer to lower commitment times

5 “must do” for the learning industry in the Trump era

We have broken this article into 4 parts

- Past
- Present
- Future
- Solutions

Past

Some traits being seen by Mr Donald Trump are

- Breaking convention
This is shown by his unclear approach to accepting defeat.
- Bringing internal unrest
The protests after his election is an indication of this.
- Divisive
His approach to Islam and long standing NATO alliance may be a step in this direction.
- Shrinking direction
His approach of Americanisation may be a protectionist attitude.
- Inconsistent
The change in stance on abortion is to be considered.
- Intolerance
The alleged behaviour towards women, Islam, NATO and joke on handicapped journalist may be a warning for us.

- Law and society not sacrosanct
The string of law suits against him specially one against Trump University may be his respect for society.
- Larger picture ignored
The non commitment to environment and law is to be considered.

Present

The world is blindly playing follow the leader. America as of now is the world super power and will influence the ecosystem in its various forms.

Future

We need to be prepared with the following approaches

- Show results from learning
Results speak for themselves when confronted with intolerant and opportunist attitudes
- Innovate and justify
The environment is going to encourage breaking convention.
- Conviction of purpose
When one is confronted with divisive and internal unrest ones conviction is tested to the ultimate
- Self sustaining budgets as far as possible
When the larger picture is ignored money speaks
- Fire fighting preparedness
This is the only answer to inconsistent direction

Solution

Conviction of purpose is the single most important attitude to be nurtured because in absence of results, commitment to long term innovation, lower budgets and continuous fire fighting that is the answer or cure all.

Summary

Conviction is extremely important in the Trump era.

Author

Prashant Khanna